The Palmer House, Rock of Ages
532 High Street, Chestertown
c.1782

The Palmer House stands on the northwestern half of Lot No. 62 in Chestertown. The entire lot had been sold by Simon Wilmer (II) to Joseph Everett for @10 prior to August 10, 1737. On that date Wilmer entered into a sale of the same lot to Joseph's two sons and heirs, St. Leger and Abraham.¹

Abraham received the northwest half of lot No. 62 and kept it until 1756, when he and his wife Margaret transferred it to Mary Stanton for @20.² Mary's daughter, Sarah and her husband Henry Hynson of Queen Annes County sold the lot to John Palmer for @75 in 1782.³

Palmer built the existing three bay stone structure over a full basement. Either contemporarily or soon thereafter, the space between it and the Hopkins House to the west was filled with a stone wing having the same roof line. Old photos of the house show a room at ground level with a window above, and a small dormer on the back of the roof. This structure was probably a kitchen wing and access from the main house was probably gained via a door where the present west window is located. The presence of brick down to the second floor level in the west gable might be explained by the fact that the kitchen fireplace was connected to the main flue and the irregularities were left when the wing was removed after 1903. After the old kitchen was removed, a frame leanto was added on the back of the house.

John Palmer sold the house and lot in 1811 to his son Edward for @200 ($533.50 is also stated in the deed).⁴ Edward was in the same year the administrator of his neighbor's estate (Elizabeth Hopkins Pope). At the public sale of Pope's personal property, John Palmer purchased several items.⁵ Both John and Edward were heirs of Mrs. Pope, receiving $540.79 3/4 each.⁶

Apparently Edward sold the property to Thomas Edwards without recording the deed. After Thomas Edwards' death, the chancery court ordered the property be sold to William Sappington, which was recorded in 1836.⁷

The 1841 Tax Assessment lists Sappington residing on Lot No. 62 with "Buildings in tolerable Repair" and as owning two houses on part of lot No. 89 and a blacksmith shop occupied by William Webb and G. Usilton in bad repair. Both properties were valued at $700.00.⁸

private residence

This dwelling is unusual in the Chestertown area as stones this size are not found here. Legend states that they were brought in ships as ballast to the then thriving port of Chestertown. Rock of Ages is a small $1\frac{1}{2}$ storey modest home with most pleasing proportions.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Rock of Ages is so titled because of it being constructed of large stones, which local legend says were brought over to this country as ballast in ships. Local legend also says a Captain Palmer brought them over and built the house in the late 17th century, however Palmers owned the house from 1782 to about 1830s. Indeed Palmer may have built the house but not in the 1600s!

The house is 1½ storey, of stone construction, painted white with green trim. It is 3 bays wide with a central door with plain molding being flanked by 2 6/6 double hung shuttered windows. There is a small porch surrounding the front entrance. Beneath the first floor windows are 2 low cellar windows. On the A roof, of tar paper shingles are 3 6/6 double hung windows in pedimented dormers. The east side is solid stone construction with the chimney which is within the wall being of brick above the middle of the wall. The cornice turns onto the side facade and returns, both in front and back, and the bargeboard is plain. The west facade has a similar chimney arrangement as the east, however at the first floor level in the rear there is a 6/6 double hung shuttered window.

A frame addition has been added to the rear and neighbors who have been in the house say the stairway which was originally circling the chimney on the east end has been removed and there is now a central stairway. Also there is reported to be very little woodwork, etc. inside.

In F.G. Usilton's History of Kent County there is a photo of the "Palmer House" with 4 flat headed dormers, 6/6, on the rear.

As with other brick houses in this block the water table is only on the front facade and rises to the level of the base of the front door.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Rock of Ages, or the Palmer House, as it is locally called, is the only house constructed of stone in this area. Stones of this size are not found here and legend has it that they were carried to Chestertown as ballast in ships by a Captain Palmer. It is characteristic of small modest 1½ storey houses of the period, being unusual because of its stone construction.

The proportions are pleasing and there has not been much alteration of the exterior.

Again, local legend has this house built by Capt. Palmer in the late 1600s, however, no Palmer owned the property until 1782 and it is not constructed as a house of any earlier period than the mid to late 1700s.
